CLIBRANS' LIST OF ROSES.

"Bloom like sweet roses in the summer air."

—"Love's Labour Lost," II., 2.

THE QUEEN OF FLOWERS.

The Rose, "England's Floral Emblem," is, in its various forms, probably the widest-known and most-loved flower on earth. Ancient writers have told of its charms; the earliest poets sang its praises. Small wonder for a bloom that has retained its popularity through the ages to stand to-day as the "Queen of Flowers."

ROSES ANCIENT AND MODERN.

What would have been said by the early admirers of the Rose could they have seen the many gloriously-beautiful forms that are in existence to-day? Every desirable feature of the Rose has been enhanced and further improved by the skill and untiring patience of the Hybridist. New forms have been brought into existence that are of stronger and improved constitution and growth, more profuse in bloom, richer and purer in colour, and intensified in fragrance; a type or series of types that was unknown to the ancient.

THE ADAPTABILITY OF ROSES.

So many and so varied are the different types of Roses that it is now possible to select forms that are adapted for any purpose—highly-refined, delicate blooms for cultivation indoors, or in a favourable situation outside; dwarf-growing, free-blooming sorts, naturally adapted for bedding purposes, producing a long and continuous display of bloom. Other varieties remarkable for producing flowers of faultless form and outline; varieties of climbing habit for covering walls, fences, pergolas, &c.; strong-growing, hardy sorts, of rambling habit, that delight in growing over rocks, ledges, rough banks, and similar positions. Other sorts adapt themselves for growing as hedges, and so on.

SELECTION OF SORTS.

We have endeavoured in the following pages to include all varieties that are of real merit, excluding those that cannot with confidence be recommended. This has necessitated the discarding from our Collection very many varieties that do not reach the standard of merit we consider needful.

ACRES OF ROSES.

Eight acres of land devoted to the cultivation of Roses is undoubtedly a large area; we find, however, that it is not large enough to cope with the heavy demand we experience, season by season, for our plants. It is an accepted fact that Roses grown in the North of England are possessed of a stronger constitution, and invariably succeed better when transplanted to another place than do Roses grown in the more Southern parts of the country. To this fact, together with the results attendant upon the special care that is bestowed upon every detail connected with our Rose Department, we attribute our huge output. Our Nurseries are open for inspection by any of our friends. We shall be pleased to make arrangements for a conveyance to meet the train, either at Hale or Altrincham Station, upon receiving intimation of the proposed visit a few posts in advance.

SPECIAL NOTE.

In order to simplify our List, and to make room for new varieties, we have been compelled to re-number our entire collection. When ordering, we should be glad if our customers would kindly state the number of List (see outside of cover) from which the varieties are selected. It will also be noted that we have taken the opportunity of classifying the various sections under fewer heads than formerly.

ROSES.

BRIEF DIRECTIONS AS TO CULTURE, &c.

A SITUATION apart from other flowers is preferable. It should be sheltered from high winds, but still open and not surrounded closely by trees or shrubs. Heavy clay or very damp soils must be well drained, as the roots will not thrive in sour soil, and in such situations it is advisable to keep the bed above the surrounding level. S., S.E., or S.W. aspect is advisable.

SOIL.—A heavy loam, which feels greasy when pressed, is the best. Briars require heavier soils than other Rose Stocks. All light soils may be improved by adding stiff loam or clay which has been pulverised by frost.

PLANTING.—November is the best month, but any time will do until the end of March. Roses on Manetti or La Grifferaie Stocks should be planted 3 inches or 4 inches below where they are budded, but on Briar Stocks the union should be level with the soil. If planted in a border, do not be afraid of making a large hole, nor of stirring the soil too much, and be careful that the manure is thoroughly mixed with the compost or soil and not put close to the stems or roots. Plant firmly; mulch the surface with about 3 inches of manure, and fork that in about March. Cow manure is best for hot, light soils, but stable manure is very suitable if well rotted and used liberally.

PRUNING.—Do this in March in the South, or in good growing localities, but about Manchester, or similar localities, April is generally best. Select only the well-ripened shoots, short jointed, and not too strong, and as near the ground as possible, the stronger they are the longer they may be left; the usual length is from 4 inches to 12 inches. In strong-growing varieties, prune to leave five or six eyes for each shoot; weak growers only two or three. All weakly and unripe shoots and old wood ought to be cut away. Always prune to an onward branching eye. A good knife is best to prune with. Do not prune at planting time.

WATERING.—In dry weather, when coming into bloom, this should be done two or three times weekly; a thorough drenching, not a mere surface wetting should be given. Liquid manure, weak, ought to be used about every ten days.

INSECTS.—The first is the Rose Maggot, in early Spring, and hand-picking is the only remedy. Green Fly must be checked by syringing or dipping the ends of the shoots in a solution of Lemon Oil, Tobacco Water, or some other approved insecticide. A good syringing daily helps to keep insects down.

MILDEW.—Dust the foliage with Flowers of Sulphur as soon as the mildew appears. If the leaves are dry the plants should be syringed before the sulphur is applied.

THE NATIONAL ROSE SOCIETY'S SPECIAL SELECTIONS OF ROSES FOR VARIOUS PURPOSES.

WE have pleasure in offering the following special collections of Roses selected by the National Rose Society as being the best varieties for the purposes stated that have as yet been introduced, or that have been in commerce sufficiently long to allow of their being thoroughly tested.

The members of the N.R.S. in their corporate capacity form the most expert, competent, and unbiassed authority on Roses in this country. On these grounds we feel sure that our friends will appreciate the opportunity of acquiring the selections that are here given.

Brief colour descriptions are given ; for more complete descriptions, see body of Catalogue.

HYBRID PERPETUAL ROSES.

(Rosa damascena hybrida.)

This group is perhaps the finest and most popular of all; they are mostly hardy and of vigorous growth, and bloom freely from June to November. The flowers are very beautiful, highly fragrant, and embrace almost every shade of colour except yellow and blue. If the best results are desired, good cultivation is essential. Plant in a deep, rich, well-manured soil, and water freely during dry weather. Prune according to the habit of growth of each kind; all weak shoots should be closely cut in, those which are vigorous left longer. For garden decoration, exhibition, pot culture, and forcing during Winter they are magnificent. We make special collections for smoky districts, for cutting purposes, show blooms, &c. See pages 3 to 9 for sorts, prices, &c.

Forcing Roses are marked (F), Exhibition Roses (E), Garden Decorative Roses (G), Climbers and Tall-growing varieties (C).

For Prices, see page 10.

TEA-SCENTED & NOISETTE ROSES.

Tea-Scented Roses (R. indicata odorata).—Tea Roses are an important class, and justly admired for their delicious fragrance and delicate tints of colour. For planting out in Conservatories, for forcing, or for pot culture under glass, they are unequalled, and with good cultivation a plentiful supply of flowers may be had throughout the season. To be successfully grown out of doors they must be planted in the warmest and sunniest parts of the garden, in a well-drained, light, rich soil, and given an abundant supply of water during the hot weather, and slightly protected from frost in severe Winter with fern, fir, or furze branches. A sure and safe plan of wintering Teas outdoors is to earth up the plants like celery to about 9 inches high, removing the soil in April, and pruning well back. Teas generally should not be pruned very closely, but weak or unripened wood ought to be cut out entirely.

Noisette Roses (R. moschata Noisettiana).—The Noisettes are a class of Roses flowering mostly in clusters throughout the Summer and Autumn, and are generally very free bloomers. Many make fine Pillar Roses. In pruning them the old wood should be thinned out, and the new wood left nearly full length. The vigorous growers are well adapted for Climbing, Pillar, or Weeping Roses, flowering freely late in the year. This section, like the Teas, is well adapted for pot culture, also for outdoor cultivation in favourable situations.

CLIMBING ROSES.

The varieties comprised in this class are undoubtedly amongst the most beautiful and useful of all Roses. Their vigour of growth and profuseness of bloom have made them of the greatest value for clothing pillars, Pergolas, Arches, Summerhouses, and similar structures; for covering banks, forming fences, and a great variety of other purposes for which a plant of creeping, climbing, or rambling habit is required. The colours range from the purest white to the most intense crimson. The formation of the flowers varies from single in varieties such as Blush Rambler and Hiawatha to perfectly double such as the varieties Crimson Rambler, Dorothy Perkins, and many others.

The "Wichuraiana" section to which the well-known and beautiful Dorothy Perkins belongs, is the hardiest and most vigorous of all climbing Roses; they are also remarkable for the wonderful freedom with which the flowers are produced.

The different classes are indicated thus: Wichuraiana (Wich.); Climbing Polyantha (Cl. Poly.); Boursalt (B); Ayrshire (A); Evergreen (E).

NOTE.—Several other Roses of climbing habit will be found in the H.P., T., and H.T. sections.

CHINA AND DWARF POLY- ANTHA ROSES.

China Roses.—These roses are well adapted for growing in small pots or for planting in beds on lawns, or in any situation where a constant succession of flowers is desired. They are all tolerably hardy, and of moderate growth. They succeed best in warm, dry soils, with a moderate dressing of well-decayed manure and leaf mould once a year. Thin out the smaller shoots, and prune moderately about the beginning of April. For protection in severe Winters a covering of 4 or 5 inches of cocoa-nut fibre refuse is the best material that could be used.

Polyantha Roses, often called "Fairy Roses."—These are extremely interesting, and admirably adapted for pot culture; flowers small and borne in clusters, very pretty for conservatory (contrasting very effectively with other flowering plants), and also good for outdoor beds and borders, their lovely miniature double flowers showing well against the massive blooms of the popular H.P.'s. A bed of "Polyantha Roses" in variety with the old blush or crimson China will provide a beautiful sheet of colour for many weeks.

China Roses are marked (C), Dwarf Polyantha Roses (P).

PENZANCE SWEET BRIARS.

These lovely hybrids are quite distinct from any class of Rose yet in commerce. Apart from their extreme beauty, they are most interesting, being crosses between the common Sweet Briar and various other Roses, such as Austrian Briar, varieties of gallica, &c. Like their parents, the common Sweet Briar, the foliage is deliciously scented. The flowers are single or semi-double, and are of the most beautiful tints and produced in great profusion. The plants are perfectly hardy even in the coldest situations, and possess a robust vigour, bushes four or five years old throwing up shoots of 10, 12, and even 15 feet high ; these when covered with flowers of the most delicate shades have a most gorgeous effect.

Plants from ground, 9d. and 1/- each ; 6/- and 9/- per dozen.

AUSTRIAN, SCOTCH, AND SWEET BRIAR ROSES.

Austrian Briar Roses (R. lutea).—The Austrian Briars are early, distinct in habit, and their blooms are so strikingly beautiful as to make them special favourites with all who see them. They need care in pruning ; the shoots should be left almost full length, bent down, and thinned well out.
